WELCOME TO THE

WILD WEST

Saddle up, Maniacs, and hit the trail for action-packed adventure. Protect the streets of Gold City Junction with Sheriff Wild Wyatt West.

6765 GOLD CITY JUNCTION

There's gold in that there town — in the bank and in the armored stagecoach. But guard it closely — those bandits are robbin' the bank, holdin' up the stagecoach, lootin' the General Store and just causin' trouble!

Load up on supplies at the General Store.

Comes with two safes... so watch out for bank robbers.

Watch out for Black Bart, he can get into any bank in town.

MEET

Flatfoot Thompson

Occupation: Card player, bank burglar, train robber

Features: Long, dirty brown mustache, large front teeth sticking out of his mouth, bowlegged, feet are flat

Remarks: Wanted for robbery of Gold City Junction Bank.

MEET

Sheriff Wild Wyatt West

Wild Wyatt is the toughest lawman in the West. He once walked 100 miles through the desert to lock up Flatfoot Thompson for littering. He's so tough that his favorite food is grilled cactus, and he likes to pour hot sauce on all his food, even ice cream!

6755 SHERIFF'S LOCK-UP

Sheriff Wild Wyatt West locks up the bandits and throws away the keys. You don't want to find your picture on one of the wanted posters in his office!

Flatfoot is locked up for looting. But he won't be for long.

Black Bart has a plan to spring his pal from

Boom! Flatfoot is on the loose once again.

6761 BANDIT'S SECRET HIDEOUT

This hideout is so secret, even outlaws need a map to find it. If any soldier comes too close, he may trip over a wire that sends a cannon rolling out of the gold mine.

Don't look now, but we've got company.

Better hide the loot, quick!

When nosey soldiers trip on the rope, the cannon rolls out to protect the hideout.

Black Bart:
He'll wear any

as it's black.

Flatfoot Thompson and the gang were hiding out on the Outlaw Trail one night when three riders entered their camp. It was Colonel Colt Carson and Sheriff Wild Wyatt West. "Howdy, Flatfoot," said the Colonel. "Don't worry. We're not after you. We just saw your campfire and rode in to get warm."

"Who else is with you?" asked Dewey Cheatum. "We saw three riders."

"It's just me and the Colonel," said the sheriff.

"Must be Butch," Flatfoot said. "Stories around here say that the ghost of Butch Cassidy roams the Outlaw Trail near Brown's Park, Colorado. It was one of Butch's favorite hideouts."

Legends of Lost Loot

Told by: Dewey Cheatum

"An old timer named Stony Wilcox told me this story," Dewey Cheatum began. "A while back, three miners were working the Black Prince gold mine in Colorado. At least everybody thought they were miners. But the three men were really stagecoach robbers using the mine as their hideout. One day in 1884, the law went after them. The bandits had to get out of town, but before they left, they hid their loot in a mine shaft filled with water."

Some years later, one of the old outlaws stumbled to the door of Stony Wilcox's cabin. Just before he died, he told Stony about the lost loot in the old Black Prince mine. Stony quickly bought the mine and looked for the treasure, but he couldn't find it because there was too much water. So Stony threw his hat in the flooded mine shaft and pretended to disappear. When some friends saw his hat floating in the water, they thought Stony drowned. While they pumped water out of the mine to find him, Stony showed up. Now that the water was gone, Stony pulled up an iron strongbox filled with $24,000 in gold!"

Butch Cassidy's real name was Robert Leroy Parker.

Phantoms in Forts

Told by: Colonel Colt Carson

"I've heard stories of mysterious ghosts at Fort Laramie in Wyoming," said Colonel Colt Carson. Visitors and workers there have seen the ghosts of soldiers and heard them run along the wooden walks. One ghost has been haunting that area for about 150 years. In 1871, a cavalry officer rode out of the fort and saw a young woman in a green dress riding a black horse. When he went to warn her about riding alone, she disappeared over a hill. All he saw was dust settling — no horse, no tracks, no woman."

"There are even ghosts at Fort Legoredo," whispered the Colonel. Once while we were playing cards in headquarters, we heard strange noises below us. Then the misty ghost of a general floated up through the closed trapdoor and yelled, 'Be quiet. We're planning an expedition down here.' After we saluted him and quieted down, he disappeared before our eyes."

Nobody Here But Us Ghosts

Told by: Sheriff Wild Wyatt West

"Garnet, Montana was a rip-roarin' gold mining town where the miners would play cards, dance, and sing. But when people stopped finding gold, all the people left, and the town slowly fell apart. Not long ago, some folks started restoring the town the way it used to be. During the day, workers heard the sounds of blacksmiths pounding on anvils and wagons rolling through town. And at night, they heard ghostly singing, laughing, and piano music."

"All I can say is that Gold City Junction won't become a ghost town," Sheriff West said. "We have plenty of good people, a bank, a general store, and a bust-proof jail that'll hold any outlaw. What do ya say to that, Flatfoot?"

"Don't look now, sheriff, but I think Butch Cassidy's ghost just stole your horse," Flatfoot replied as the sheriff's horse rode off with a ghostly bandit in the saddle.

Picture Perfect

Told by: LEGO Club member Jonathan E. Nolen, Alabama

One summer my brother, Dave, and I went to the Wild West. My brother and I scheduled a tour of a ghost town. Dave got sick so I went alone. I had no idea what would happen.

The next morning, I went to the ghost town with my guide, Curtis J. Elliott. First, we went to a white building. It had a sign that read, "$ Bank." We walked through the door. As we entered, a hazy mist surrounded us.

Inside, we saw three robbers. In the corner a cavalry officer and a bank teller were tied up. We startled the robbers and they ran out. Sheriff Wild Wyatt West quickly caught them.

We were both named honorary officers. The greatest honor was being in a photograph of the cavalry. Right after it was taken, I saw the mist again. Curtis decided to stay. So, we said good-bye and I went back to the twentieth century.

The next day, Dave and I went to a museum. There was the picture with Curtis and me in it. I kept it a secret, though I will never forget that day.

Dewey Cheatum:
His favorite animal is the cheet-ah!

Maniacs, you don't have to go to a ghost town to relive those thrilling days of the Wild West. You can build your own action-packed Wild West forts, hideouts, and towns right at home. Have fun Partners!

Instructions are included to transform this sleek cycle into a supercharged dragster. For some real rubber burning, add the #8720 Power Pack (sold separately) to motorize the dragster.

Flex System

Shift the control stick to tilt the main rotors.

Turn the crank to activate rotors and turbo motor.

#8412 Nighthawk

This cool copter rules the skies. In the Nighthawk, you'll soar like a condor, fly like an eagle and hover like a hawk.

Just turn the crank to fire up the turbo motor and get the rotors spinning. Shift the control stick in the cockpit to tilt the main rotors. The flex system makes every move super smooth, so hang on for some amazing airborne adventures.

Instructions also show you how to transform the Nighthawk into an awesome airplane.

Motorize the copter! With the #8720 Power Pack (sold separately), you can really rev those spinning rotors.
